As founder of the Pergamene Kingdom, Philetairos first served Lysimachos as guardian of his treasury in Pergamon from ca. 301-282 BC. However, when Lysimachos' rule became too insecure, Philetairos shifted his allegiance to Seleukos I. Lysimachos and Seleukos I met in battle at Corpedium in 281, with the former perishing. After, Philetairos enjoyed a few months of alliance with Seleukos I before his new master was assassinated in 280. Philetairos was then essentially independent and chose not to readily transfer his loyalty to Antiochos I, son and successor of Seleukos. Philetairos issued five types of Tetradrachms, none with his portrait: the Lysimachos type (ca. 287-282), the Horse head/Elephant type (Ca. 281), the Alexander III type with the name of Alexander (Ca. 280+?), Seleukos I type (Ca. 269/8-263; some of these die-link with the Alexander-name issues), and finally, the Seleukos I head/Athena type (ca. 269-263), which is the only one of Philetairos' coinages with his name. Its reverse, the seated Athena, inspired future Pergamene coins.
